CONSIDER STEPS TO SUCCESS IF:

- You want your suppliers to have sellable products, equitable pricing that works for international markets, and an understanding of systems and policies that result in great working relationships with the travel trade.
- You want your destination to attract inbound travel visitors that will expand your international market segments (FIT, Group, and DMC/MICE visitors).
- You want to inform GMs and revenue managers who make decisions but do not understand the tour and travel market.
- You want to add your destination to international inbound itineraries for new business.
- You want to successfully play your role in providing impactful destination stewardship to support your communities and tourism businesses.

“Pure Michigan, like many state DMOs, has been working in the international marketing arena for years to generate awareness of the state as a premium, four-season destination. For our efforts to be fully successful, we knew we would need to do a better job of engaging our local DMOs, hoteliers and attractions with tour operators, agencies and especially receptive tour operators.

IITA has helped to inform our industry about this complicated and important business, how it works and how they can generate additional international business.”
